Malizole Mdlekeza (FIA FASSA CAIA CERA) is a qualified South African actuary (a fellow of the Institute & Faculty of Actuaries in the UK, and a fellow of the Actuarial Society of South Africa), specialising in pensions and investments. Drawing from his vast experience, spanning nearly 10 years across multiple areas of South African financial services, he founded MDM Actuaries out of a passion for effecting meaningful change in the South African institutional investment & pension fund landscape.

He is the current chairman of the Actuarial Society of South Africa's Alternative Investments Forum. This is a forum of 15 actuaries and actuarial professionals focusing on various issues around the suitability of alternative investments such as infrastructure, private equity and venture capital for institutional investors such as pension funds.

In 2017, he was chosen as one of the Mail and Guardian newspaper's Top 200 South Africans, and regularly speaks at various local & international events & conferences.

Further to this, Malizole Mdlekeza is a lecturer in actuarial science at the University of Cape Town, the university from which he graduated twice, where he lectures postgraduate actuarial science studies around pensions and investments. He mentors a number of actuarial students and aspiring actuaries as well, both directly and indirectly.

He is the first black South African lecturer in actuarial science in UCT's 190+ year history.
